Performance from the USSR with regard to the withdrawal of IL-28s.

(b) No adequate arrangements have been made for ground inspection in presence of US observers. There is no guarantee of the presence of Cuba and adequate safeguards against the presence and re-introduction of offensive weapons.

(c) Recent reconnaissance has confirmed the presence in Cuba of organized Soviet military units in Cuba with the most modern field equipment. These cannot be dismissed merely as QTE Soviet technicians UNQTE.

(d) Castro has now announced that he intends to fire on US reconnaissance planes. Continued U.S. reconnaissance is essential action authorized by the OAS resolution.

(e) Since the US must continue surveillance, there is serious possibility of an incident against which the US is determined to take retaliatory measures.

(f) Situation fluid and may take one of several courses. The Soviets may act against Castro or in any event may not support him in exchanges that might follow his interference with US reconnaissance. On other hand, they may provide military support for Castro. The nature of the future US action will naturally depend upon which of options Soviets select.

(g) Continued refusal on the part of the USSR to withdraw the IL-28s or active Soviet military participation in action against necessary military surveillance might well require the reestablishment of the quarantine and its extension to POL.

(h) The President intends to make clear to the nation and the world on
